

Le Cong Khanh (チョーライ病院 消化器外科医 / 2017年10月1日～14日)

My name is Cong Khanh Le. I am currently working at Hepato-Biliary and pancreatic surgery Department at Cho Ray Hospital. I have just completed an advanced training course at the University of Tsukuba Hospital, Japan from October 1st to October 14th of 2017. During the course, I received very warm welcome and support from my colleagues at University of Tsukuba Hospital, especially Professor Akiyama, Chief of International Medical Center. I had a effective time for learning and practicing there. The working attitude of Japanese doctors is very earnest and scientific. I joined daily morning round, the journal club every Friday, and other conferences with Professor Ohkohchi, Professor Oda and other colleagues. I also joined the operating cases as Whipple procedure, laparoscopic splenectomy and laparoscopic hepatectomy... During the weekend, Professor Akiyama and colleagues took me around so that I could visit many places in Tsukuba city. Once again, I would like to sincerely thank medical staff at University of Tsukuba Hospital for their utmost hospitality.

Morning ward round at Department of surgery

Observing Lap. Splenectomy

Joining in operation case with Prof Takahashi

Observing Whipple procedure of Dr Shimomura Joining Journal club

Joining TATME conference with Prof Oshiro, Dr Takahashi, Dr Shimomura, Dr Ogawa and colleagues in GI and HBP surgery team

Relaxing with Prof Akiyama and colleagues

